Item 8.01. Other Events.

On September 7, 2011, Neoprobe Corporation (the “Company”) issued a press release announcing that that it has received positive scientific advice late last week from the European Medicines Agency (EMA) on the development of RIGScan™ CR, the Company’s proprietary radiopharmaceutical for the detection of colorectal cancer. In the EMA meeting, the Company sought scientific guidance on the chemistry, manufacturing and controls (CMC) related to RIGScan and on non-clinical requirements needed to resume clinical development. EMA provided positive feedback on these development activities and on the Company’s plan for manufacturing and non-clinical testing. EMA confirmed the opportunity for the Company to consider evaluating a humanized RIGScan antibody for clinical development and commercialization.

The meeting with the EMA follows a successful pre-investigational new drug (IND) meeting with the United States Food and Drug Administration (FDA) earlier this year. Potential use of a humanized antibody form instead of a mouse-based antibody is an important, positive development enabling utility of an improved technology, state-of-the art manufacturing processes and a more clinically acceptable drug. The potential shift to a humanized structure would better position the product for regulatory approval, partnering, commercialization and enhanced intellectual property protection opportunities.

The Company does not believe that the transition to a humanized antibody would delay the ongoing CMC process development activities underway since the FDA pre-IND meeting. Additionally, based on the discussion of clinical objectives for RIGScan with EMA, the Company does not envision that a change to the humanized antibody form will increase the anticipated overall number of patients required for registration. Detailed plans for clinical development must be presented to and discussed with both FDA and EMA to align, to the extent possible, the clinical studies required for approval.
