Cousins Properties Inc. (NYSE: CUZ) will buy Parkway Properties Inc. in a $2 billion-plus deal that allows Cousins to exit a Houston office market weakened by the downturn in oil prices.

The deal announced Friday morning will deepen Cousins' presence in Atlanta, Austin and Charlotte and give it a strong presence in Phoenix, Orlando and Tampa. The company's portfolio will expand to 41 properties comprising 15.8 million square feet. Cousins will remain headquartered in Atlanta and continue to be led by President and CEO Larry Gellerstedt and the company's existing senior management team.

As a result of these transactions, we believe Cousins will become the premier Sun Belt urban office REIT with increased scale, an expanded portfolio of trophy properties, a dominant market share in leading urban submarkets, a more diverse customer base, and additional opportunities to grow and capture embedded value within our portfolio, Gellerstedt said in a conference call.

In an interview with media this morning, Gellerstedt added, "This is a transaction that is really as close to perfect as you can get."

Just as significantly, the deal will take Cousins out of the Houston office market. Cousins and Parkway (NYSE: PKY) will spin off their Houston properties into a publicly traded REIT called HoustonCo.

The move comes just three years after Cousins spent $1.1 billion in July 2013 to expand into Houston with its purchase of a 4.4-million-square-foot Houston office portfolio along with an office tower in Fort Worth, Texas. At the time, Houston's office market was robust and Cousins executives cited Houston's job growth fueled by the U.S. energy revolution.

Since then, the price of oil has plunged and several Houston energy companies cut back on expansion plans. The result: office space poured back onto the city's sublease market, vacancy continues to climb.

The amount of sublease space on the market more than doubled in Houston from the end of 2014 to 2015 and now stands at 9.2 million square feet, and leasing activity has dropped by 30 percent, according to Colliers International. Cousins' stock price, which was trading at $10.43 per share this morning, has been penalized by its exposure in Houston, commercial real estate analysts have said.

Today's deal will take Cousins' property portfolio from 40 percent in Houston to zero in Houston. Almost half of Cousins' office portfolio will now be in Atlanta, including trophy towers such as 3344 Peachtree and One Buckhead Plaza.

Cousins is shifting its exposure toward Atlanta during one of the rare times in the city's history that its office market has rents climbing to all-time highs in some districts while there's very little new development.

Cousins will beef up its Atlanta portfolio in neighborhoods such as Buckhead, where rents continue to climb, undeveloped land is scarce and speculative development remain limited, for now. Job growth, the fuel for office space demand, remains strong. Economic forecasts have estimated Atlanta could add between 80,000 to 90,000 jobs this year and rank among the top cities for employment gains.

The thing that is so exciting to come out this cycle in our business is you haven't seen speculative office building (in Atlanta), Gellerstedt said in this morning's call with Atlanta media. If you look at Houston, which is just a little bigger than Atlanta, they have 11 or 12 million square feet of spec being built. Pure spec being built in Atlanta is between a half million and a million feet. That's big.

Gellerstedt said he doesn't expect more than one or two more Atlanta office buildings will be developed this cycle.

The deal will also expand Cousins' office holdings into Orlando and Tampa, Fla., Tempe Ariz. and Charlotte, N.C., where Gellerstedt said fundamentals also remain strong. The transaction with Parkway is expected to close sometime in the fourth quarter.
