ENTEGRIS EMPLOYEE TOWN HALL

January 28, 2019

Bertrand Loy: Good morning, everyone. It is great to be speaking with you today about our merger with Versum Materials. For those of you who are on the webcast, we'll be actually using some supporting slides as I speak.

Let me just say that we are very excited about this transaction and the benefits we expect it will create for our company, our employees and our customers. I will spend a few minutes reviewing why we believe Versum is the right partner for Entegris and what we see for the combined company and our employees going forward.

Let me start with the description of the transaction and the benefits of the transaction. As you have heard me say in the past, Entegris has never been a more integral part of the semiconductor technology roadmap across the industry ecosystem. And frankly our results speak for themselves in that regard. Still, we know that our industry is constantly evolving and that our customers will continue to expect more from their partners, companies like Entegris.

And this is why we have agreed to merge with Versum Materials and as you know, Versum is a leading specialty material supplier for the semiconductor industries, very much like Entegris is. As one company we will have the industry's broadest technology portfolio and an enhanced set of capabilities. We will also have a much broader global scale, which will enable us to better engage with the industry's leaders in all major markets.

And this new scale will put us in a position to increase our long term commitment to both innovation and collaboration with our customers. So with these compelling attributes and with our complementary portfolios, we will be able to better address and capitalize on our customers' evolving needs for new materials and higher purity requirements as new device architectures become more complex.

In other words, we believe the combined company will be ideally positioned to more effectively help our customers achieve higher yields and new levels of device performance and reliability. And we also expect to be able to accelerate the development and time to market of new technologies that are aligned with the industry technology roadmap.

Let's now talk about what it means for employees. Another important benefit of the combination is the offering of a larger company and the benefits of a larger platform for all of our employees around the world. I would sincerely say that our employees are the most talented in the industry and that both companies recognize the contribution that you all make to our success.

I also believe that there is a very natural cultural fit for our two companies. Our values and unifying principles aligned very well with each other. Both companies are two highly customer focused organizations and this combination will allow us to stay true to our roots of working tirelessly to meet our customers' needs.

After close of the transaction I will have the honor and privilege to be the CEO of the combined company, and Seifi Ghasemi, the chairman of Versum Materials, will become the chairman of the combined company. In addition, you should know that Greg Graves will serve as CFO and that Michael Valente, the current general counsel of Versum, will become the general counsel of the combined company.

The new company will retain the Entegris name and the new company will have its global headquarters in Billerica, Massachusetts. I just want to point that they will we will maintain a very strong operational presence in Tempe, Arizona where Versum is currently based and headquartered.

Let me talk a little bit about the next steps in the integration work that we have ahead of us. Turning to that, many of you are familiar with our history of transactions and the integration process. You should know that Bruce Beckman will lead that process as the chief integration officer, and that as excited as we are about the merger with Versum, I really want you to know that we are still in the early days and that we may not have all of the answers that everyone has for us. But we will do our best to respond and keep you updated along the way as we have always done when we actually work on merger acquisition and integration related work.

Looking ahead, we expect to complete the transaction in the second half of 2019. This transaction and this closing obviously will be subject to the standard regulatory approvals and approvals by each company's stockholders. Until then, I want to be clear that both companies will continue to operate as separate entities as independent entities. In other words, it is business as usual for us at Entegris until the transaction closes.

Our history of successful acquisition integrations is probably one of the most impressive capabilities that we have as a team. And I know that you will all rise to the challenge as you have in the past to ensure a smooth transition to the combined company.

In closing and as I have said, we believe this transaction with Versum is an exciting step forward for Entegris as well as for our employees, stockholders, partners, and customers. We are continuing to rely on you as we have always done to continue to provide our customers with the same outstanding service and high quality products and solutions that they have come to expect from Entegris.

I am so proud of what you have accomplished and equally confident about the expanded potential that we will have together with Versum. Our combined company has a bright future and I really want to take one final time to thank you all for your commitment and dedication to Entegris.

Thank you.
