EMPLOYEE LETTER:

Dear Colleagues:

Today, I am excited to announce that we are acquiring Covidien, a global healthcare technology and medical supplies provider and a highly respected company in our industry. Under the terms of the proposed acquisition, we will pay $42.9 billion for Covidien through a combination of cash and stock. You can read more details of our announcement here www.globalmedtechleader.com.

First and foremost, this acquisition will allow us to greatly advance and accelerate our Mission of alleviating pain, restoring health and extending life for patients around the world.

Once the transaction is complete, this will further advance our industry leading position in medical technology and services, allowing us to reach more patients, in more ways, in more places. The two companies combined will have $27 billion in revenues and more than 87,000 people around the world. Our entire management team, as well as the management team of Covidien, is extremely excited about the future. Combined, we can accelerate our common goal of addressing the universal healthcare needs: improving clinical outcomes, expanding access, and optimizing cost and efficiency, thereby improving healthcare systems around the world.

This transaction is fully in line with our three growth strategies of therapy innovation, globalization and economic value. First, it will strengthen and broaden our capabilities to develop and commercialize therapy innovations. Covidien's impressive array of industry leading products enhances our existing portfolio, offers greater breadth across clinical areas, and creates exciting entry points into new therapies. These include technologies in the peripheral vascular and neurovascular space, address a broad range of open and minimally invasive surgical procedures, and give us an entry into new segments such as lung cancer and GERD.

In connection with this transaction, Medtronic has committed to invest an incremental $10 billion in U.S. technology in the form of early stage ventures, acquisitions and research and development over the next decade. Ultimately, this will lead to better healthcare systems, both in the U.S. and around the world.

Second, our globalization strategy will be significantly advanced through a much deeper presence outside the United States. With the addition of Covidien, Medtronic's revenues outside the U.S. will grow to $13 billion. We will have a $3.7 billion emerging markets business that we are confident can sustain double-digit growth over an extended period of time. Covidien has extensive capabilities in emerging market R&D and manufacturing, while Medtronic has well-established clinical expertise. These capabilities, applied across a much broader product offering, will significantly increase the number of attractive solutions we can offer to governments and major providers.

Third, this transaction enhances Medtronic's ability to deliver economic value for healthcare systems around the world. We will be able to capitalize on the deep relationships both companies have with healthcare system stakeholders, which will help us better address their cost and access needs.

By advancing our core strategies in these ways, we will build upon our industry leadership with critical competitive advantages in the evolving healthcare environment.

While the integration of Covidien into our business will take some time and can only be implemented after the acquisition closes, there are a number of things we can tell you with certainty now: Medtronic's operational headquarters will remain in Minneapolis; we will continue to operate under the Medtronic brand; and I will be Chairman and CEO. Because our product portfolios are highly complementary, there will be little impact on jobs and roles for Medtronic employees. As with most acquisitions, there will be some consolidation activity, primarily in back-office functions. We will do a thorough assessment as part of our integration process and will provide frequent employee updates.

Following the close of the transaction, Medtronic will be legally domiciled in Ireland, which is the most financially efficient way to structure this transaction. This structure will support our ability to create long-term shareholder value and make incremental investments in U.S. technology. While this new structure may receive some media scrutiny in the days and weeks ahead, I can assure you that this is the best structure, under current law, to bring these two world-class companies together.

For your reference, I have included below answers to some questions that you may have. I look forward to speaking to you at our town hall meeting tomorrow, and will answer additional questions at that time. I will continue to keep you updated in the coming weeks and months as we work toward an anticipated closing of this transaction later this calendar year or early next.

Until the transaction closes, the two businesses will continue to operate independently. It's important that we meet our current obligations and objectives in the marketplace, and I thank you in advance for maintaining your focus on our current operations.

Finally, I am extremely impressed by the Covidien team, the company that they have built, and the product pipeline they have developed. We are truly excited to welcome them to the Medtronic family. I think you will find that their deep commitment to patients mirrors our Mission-driven approach. Covidien's culture is also centered around a commitment to constant innovation. I am confident our teams will enjoy working, learning and innovating together as one.

This is a very exciting and historic day for Medtronic, and I look forward to working with you to pursue the many opportunities ahead of us.

Sincerely,

Omar
