Item 5.02 Departure of Directors or Certain Officers; Election of Directors; Appointment of Certain Officers; Compensatory Arrangements of Certain Officers.

On July 21, 2015, Corning Incorporated (Corning) announced that James B. Flaws, vice chairman and chief financial officer, will relinquish the chief financial officer title effective August 31, 2015 as part of his plan to retire later this year. Mr. Flaws will retire as vice chairman and from the Board of Directors and the Board's Finance and Executive Committees on November 30, 2015, following 42 years of distinguished service. On July 15, 2015, Corning's Board of Directors appointed R. Tony Tripeny as senior vice president and chief financial officer, effective September 1, 2015.

Mr. Tripeny, 56, joined the company in 1985 as a corporate accounting manager for Corning Cable Systems (CCS, now Corning Optical Communications). He held various roles in operations during his early career, including plant controller and division controller for the CCS equipment division. In 1996, he was appointed CCS corporate controller and CCS chief financial officer in 2000. During his time at CCS, Mr. Tripeny was the finance leader for the purchase of Siemens' world-wide cable and hardware businesses, and led the Transition Council charged with overseeing the successful integration of these two businesses into Corning.

In 2003, Mr. Tripeny became the group controller for Corning's Telecommunications Group. In 2004, he was named division vice president and operations controller. He was elected vice president and corporate controller in 2005 and senior vice president and principal accounting officer in 2009. For the last six years, Mr. Tripeny has had responsibility for the accounting, analytical services, business control, and tax functions. He has served as a member of Corning's management committee since 2014, and was previously a member of the executive leadership team since 2011.

Mr. Tripeny received a bachelor's degree in economics from the University of Pennsylvania's Wharton School of Business. He is a member of the Financial Executives Institute and the Institute of Management Accounting. Mr. Tripeny is a member of the board of directors of Hardinge Inc.
